Here and There.

It has always been supposed that when a man had a heart attack he usually considered it about three-quarters of a mile away, when the passage of youth had burned out, when there was no further expectation of life. But now we know that when, in short, a man could sit by the fire, smoke, look out the window and see the world go by and be a "has-been." Now scientists have come to the conclusion that the heart attack comes with radioactivity and taken into the blood of these "has-beens," they could grow another set of teeth, dance with the girls, go to the movies, go to the beach, forego a fourth and live to be one hundred and twenty years old. And the poor saps have fallen for it. They don't want to be "safe and sane."

Five caterpillar motor cars have crossed the Atlantic Ocean. Their purpose is to sell the two thousand miles from Tuyart, Algiers, on the north coast of Africa, to Timbuktu in Soudan, French West Africa, in twenty days. They have taken some months to make this trip. Of course these automobiles were a surprise and a wonderment to the natives, and they were not over-glad to see them. In fact, so glad were they to see them that each machine was equipped with a rapid fire gun. With the advent of these machines great things may yet be done in this vast sand plain. It contains 3,000,000 square miles of desert land, about as large as the European mainland. Notwithstanding it is a desert it supports a population of two million souls, and has quite an extensive trade. It grows cotton, gum, dates, palm oil and hides, apocynum, cotton, palm oil and ostrich feathers.

Other men are having their day now. Several years ago the Boston Post wrote concerning the men who had died in New England towns. Now people or societies are hunting for the oldest skeleton they can find. They found one in Sweden recently estimated to have been buried in 1800. The bones were excavating in Kungsholm, the probable seat of Bawulf, the hero of the oldest epic in English literature. They don't know where the bones belong, however, nor do they know if they belonged to some one who lived centuries earlier. They have found in these graves flint tools, weapons and ornaments, some of which are two thousand years old. They found the remains of a man with an amber necklace, weaver's reeds and distaff.

People don't have to go to Egypt to find and explore ruins. They can be found in America. Many have been found and explored. People don't have to go to the tomb of Old Tutenchhamun to find valuable artifacts. They can be found right here in America. During the last few years they have been finding the Hopewell Mounds in Ohio. During this exploration they have found some fine ceremonial stones and a necklace of pearls value of $10,000. These however, were not to preserve the girls who wore the pearls three thousand years ago or more, but in the American case only the pearls were left. The girl had gone.

Norway Statistics.

In the annual town report of Norway, printed recently, an assessment of the following valuation is given: Farm and residential buildings, $463,600; valuation of buildings, residential and non-residential, $760,465; real estate, total valuation, $1,223,064; lumber, coal, gas, etc., to $1,247,230; total, real and personal, $1,704,774; supplementary real estate, $4,650; personal property, $8,555. Total amount of property taxed, $1,922, $1,717,076.

Number of polls taxed, 800; polls not taxed, 79; rate of poll tax, $8; rate of property tax, $24 on a thousand; total amount of property taxed, $1,922.

Number of births, 38 males, 38 females. Number of marriages, 47; oldsmen, bridegroom at date of marriage, 65; youngest, 19; oldest bride, 63; youngest, 15; number of deaths, 22; oldest deceased, 84; oldest at date of death, 95; years dead reported from out-of-town, 28; bodies returned from France, 1.

Boy Scouts' Financial Campaign.

The following towns have reported to headquarters (county) as having definite plans under way for their Boy Scout drives in their respective towns. Each drive will be completed during the month of March:

Kosciusko, Mexico, Buckfield, Norway, and South Paris are definitely promised. West Paris, Norway, and Norway, Dixfield has just forwarded a check covering the first half of their quota. Boy Scout work with its 450 boys is becoming an established institution in Oxford County. It deserves the support of every man, woman and child in Oxford County.

Famous Dog Team.

Arthur T. Walden of Wonalancet, N. H., with his famous dog team, attended the carnival at Auburn.

Mr. Walden has had years of experience with dogs. He not only has many fine specimens, but some wonderfully trained ones. There are six dogs in the team, three of which were in the racing team last year, which won the gold cup.

On account of losing three of the fine dogs by an epidemic, and not finding their equal, Mr. Walden this year engaged in the racing this year. Mr. Walden's team is the Queen of the Show.

Chicopee, the leader, is the most noted dog in the United States. His picture has been seen in several of the papers, Norwegian papers as well. He is a red-colored dog and comes from the State of Norway. He has won all best dogs, and has been invited to Keith's Theatre.

THE OXFORD BEARS.

THE DOINGS OF THE WEEK IN ALL SECTIONS OF THE COUNTY.

Paris Hill.

Services at Paris Hill Baptist church every Sunday morning. The annual evening service at 7:30, Thursday evening prayer meetings at 7:30 o'clock.

N. A. Cummings and Clyde Shaw each spent several days in Portland last week, looking there. The annual auto mobile show is sure an attraction that it is.

The big collie dog belonging to Mr. Jenkins was operated on last Saturday after several weeks' visit to Philadelphia again. The dog was lame in his back legs, but just as they were to have a specialist come to lance it, it broke.

Mrs. Leslie Davis recently had a daughter born while at Mrs. Abbott's hospital, Feb. 18.

Word has been received of the death of Mr. Max Goudreau of Portland, California, son of Mrs. Jane (Gibson) Goodspeed.

Herb Schriner, Charles Andrews, Ted Daniels and others have been fishing through the winter. They came home at night staggering under a heavy load of fish, forty pickleback weighing over fifty pounds. The bat used was "live wire" and the net was made of mosquito netting. The "Sundowners" are all ladies.

The Sunshine Club was enjorably entertained last Thursday by Mrs. Rose Swan of South Paris.

Charles K. Hall, deputy collector of the federal income tax, will be in South Paris March 12 and 13, for the purpose of visiting income taxpayers who wish to make arrangements for payment of their taxes.

He was born Oct. 18, 1849, son of Leonard and Hannah E. (Record) Sturtevant, on the farm where he always made his home.

He married Alice, daughter of Ethel and Sam (Swan) Bumpus, forty-three years ago, and by her had six children
all of whom are living—Ralph Almer,
Virginia, wife of Fred Conn, Ida R., Walter, Ruth, Miles, Josephine, and Albertine. The mother also survives.

The father died in October, 1894, and the widow has since resided in Norway.

He was a fair representation of the parents, though the members of the staff had hoped to see, and less than were provided for at the tables. The Boy Scouts, however, were out in full force, and when it came to cheers for the speaker, they were up to the mark.

Following the banquet Albert D. Park acted as toastmaster. The first speaker was Scout Master Harriman, who went forth in detail the obligations of the Scouts and the declaration of principles.

Geo. R. Morton gave a brief account of a trip to Alaska made last summer,
with his son, Fred, and his wife, Mrs.
Alice E. Sturtevant. The mother also survives. The father died in October, 1894, and the widow has since resided in Norway.

He had been twice married, his first wife being Laura B. Penley, and his second, Sarah B. Penley, a sister to his first wife.

He is survived by his widow and two daughters, Mrs. Edith Knightly and Mrs. Elsie Hersey.

He was a Civil War veteran and member of Harry Rust Post, G. A. R., of Norway.

An amazing accident happened at the Grand Trunk station one night last week. A number of passengers were waiting for the express to Portland. One of them had a good sized bag, which he placed in the rear of the gentleman's waiting room, then sat down on the long settee some feet from it.
During the wait the train other passenger, a man, a woman, and a child gathered about this wise, engaged in conversation.
All at once there came a Growth Through Service!

The Norway National Bank has enjoyed a steady growth since the institution was established in 1872. This growth has been brought about through numerous new accounts and by giving depositors the kind of banking service that enabled them to grow financially.

Growth has been steady and we have always been able to anticipate the increasing needs of our depositors and arrange to take care of them. We have never made growth our principal objective but have devoted our attention to giving our depositors an unusual service knowing that growth will come as the logical result.

Latin-American Markets.

(By Amos C. Nourse.) A party of experts recently returned from South America have many interesting things to tell us of the markets in South and Central America. There one sees fruit, salted fish, dried fish, and strange looking fish—things that we of the North Temperate Zone know almost nothing.

In Chile the stranger will find curious toy pottery, and pottery decorated with delicate lace work. Here, also, one sees varieties of mollusks, from minuscule periwinkles to giant snails. Large quantities of homemade articles are offered for sale.

In Peru and Bolivia are offered hand-woven rugs of llama or alpaca wool, curious Indian dolls, and various kinds of woven ponchos (Indians blankets), which are said to be so durable that they are transferred from one generation to another.

The most famous market in South America is that of La Paz, where on Sundays especially congregates a curious assembly of Quichua Indians (a nation inhabiting half of Bolivia, Peru, and parts of Ecuador) who represent all of the Indian races, differing in many ways from the Quichua, and Cholas (people of mixed blood), who have become so popular and attracted that they form a distinct race, wearing distinctive costumes, mostly gaudily colored garbs, many bending over heavy loads, or leading small caravans of black, white, and brown mules.

There is a still more variegated company needed to interest the tourists, this motley crowd includes white Bolivian men and women dressed in faultless French fashions, wearing ordinary clothes, some in military mood with white or near-white faces, and colored hues ranging from ash-gray to chocolate brown, and, as if to frame that picture, a number of Indians in spite of their out above visitors of the small public parks which dot the city.

To the average American it would seem that the public life does not go on in a beautiful building. But Latin Americans have a keen eye for the aesthetic. A few years ago the city of Antofagasta erected a stately Public Market building, which fronts on a broad avenue and is quite spacious. This and other public parks are the more remarkable as Antofagasta, as many other cities of the Chilean and Peruvian railroads, had until recently only small, shabby, open-air markets.

Not from a political, but from a human point of view, the most interesting market in the Americas is that at Port-au-Prince, Haiti. It has often been said that the Haitians are indolent and lazy, but they have been misunderstood, as far as the market is concerned, because of their other characteristics. It is true they are reluctant to work for others, and that they are rarely quite satisfactory as laborers.

They are, however, hard, when forced to do what they please one rarely sees any of them idle. In fact they are the only people of the American tropics who take the trouble to cultivate a garden, and, after a short period of ground around the mountains. They seem to love to work for the sake of producing anything of value. The women make trips to the market often, and, as a rule, go to sell or barter a handful of beans, rice, or maize, or some fruit or object of their own manufacture.

Port-au-Prince has both a large covered and an open-air market, both of them always crowded. And yet the market inspector says that the total value of the goods offered by these many people never reaches a thousand dollars.

A small, imitation market is located in the harbor of Panama, near the entrance (Pacific) of the Canal.

Indians and negroes of coast villages bring their produce to the market in row boats; another name the shore boat market for the low tide to leave them high and dry on the beach, which becomes a huge open-air market.

The market in Panama has recently passed an injunction prohibiting wholesale produce dealers to start buying before houses and the smaller retail dealers have been served. One or two large dealers, who are agents of the Canal Zone commissioners were formerly first on the spot, took their pick of the most desirable stuff, leaving only second and third choice produce for the small, and less fortunate, native market.

Parabolating markets are peculiar to both Honduras and Guatemala. Usually three Indians, rarely four or two, walk through the country, stopping at every village displaying such wares as they carry.

The public market in Merida, Yucatan, Mexico, is probably the cleanest of all Latin-American markets. It is surprising to see how clean and well-arranged the market is of city of similar size (about 50,000) in the Western Hemisphere, and that there is no cleaner race of people on earth than the Mayas of Yucatan. Every person wears a white shirt, a white coat, white clothes, at the end of the working day.

The clothes of the evening are worn to work the following day.

In all Latin-American cities the sale of produce is a quiet division from producer to consumer, and taken as a whole, probably less than half of the offerings are handled by intermediaries.

It has often been said that in the United States a high cost of living is, at least in part, due to the fact that only choice fruits and vegetables are marketed.

In Latin-America second and third choice fruits and vegetables are marketed, so that the well-to-do can afford small means can easily cover their needs according to their resources.

Cheese Croquettes.

In a saucier melt three tablespoonsful of butter; when bubbling, add one-third a cup of flour, one-fourth a teaspoonful of salt and a little paprika. Stir constantly while adding two-thirds a cup of milk, and continue cooking until boiling begins, then add the yolks of two eggs, beaten, one cup of American factory cheese, cut in small pieces, and stir in a cup of grated Parmesan cheese. Turn the heat to cool. Shape in balls, dip in bread crumbs, then beat egg diluted with two tablespooms of water, then in bread crumbs again, and repeat the process.

Dish on soft paper. Serve each croquette on a slice of toast, garnished generously with shredded celery, mixed with French dressing.

Luncheon Eggs.

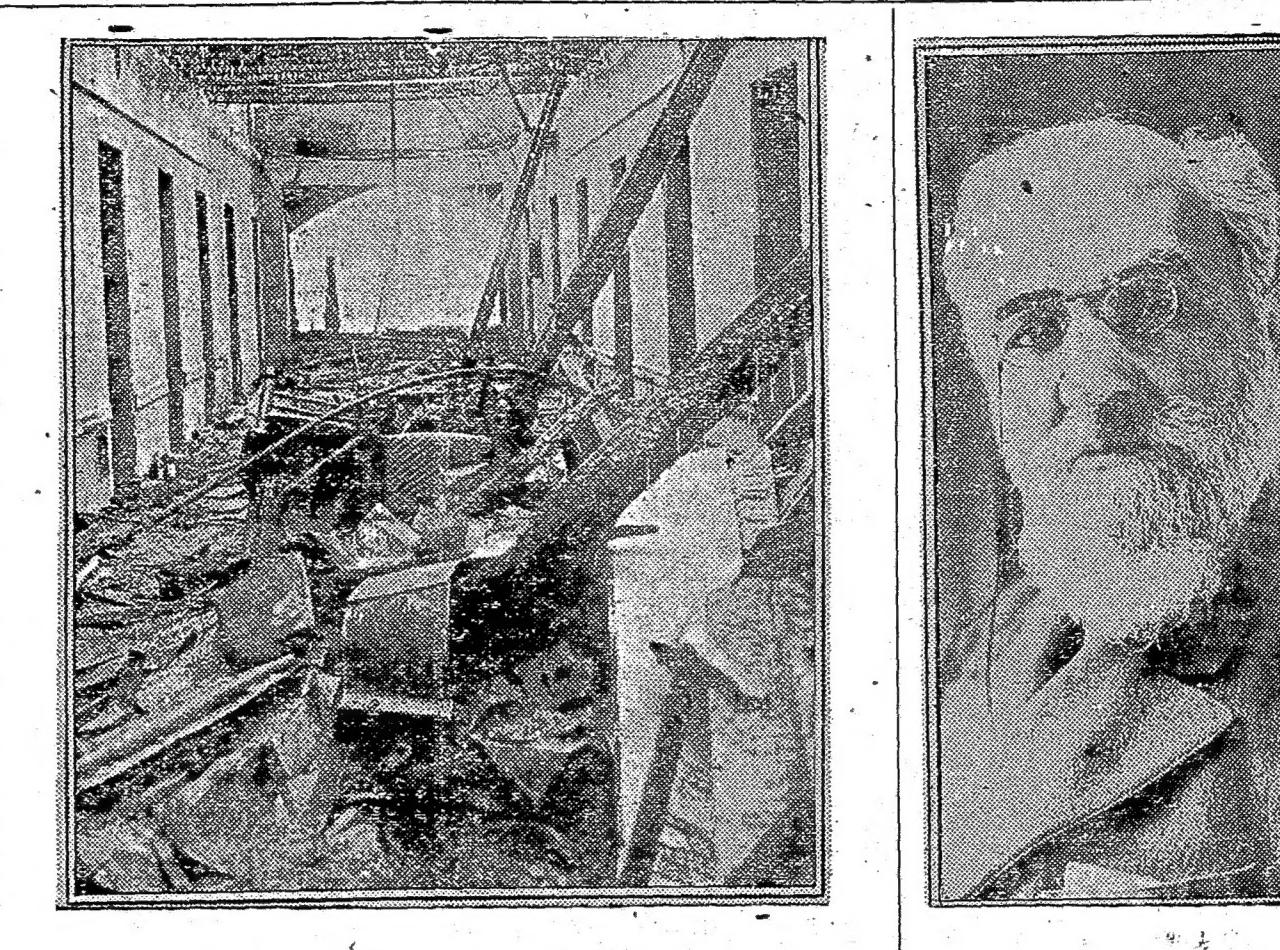

Wash a one-fourth a pound of mushrooms and chop fine; melt one tablespoomful of butter in a saucier; add the mushrooms and stir until the moisture has evaporated; add two tablespooms of flour, blend thoroughly, and then add one-half a cup of chicken stock, one-fourth a teaspoonful of salt and a little pepper; let boil two or three minutes. Cut in small pieces, add two eggs, beaten, and mix them thoroughly with the mushroom sauce and use this mixture to fill the eggs. Set the eggs in a buttered baking dish, pour over the custard, and let hot thoroughly. Just before serving place a fillet of sardine on each stuffed egg. Serve from baking-dish.

Macaroon Custard Pie.

Put in a cool oven two macaroons, and when crisp roll and sift them. Make a soft custard with one pint of cream, three beaten eggs, and six tablespooms of sugar; add a dash of nutmeg and a dash of cardamom. This may be done by beating the mixture over the fire, or over boiling water, with a Dover beater, until thick as heavy cream. Pour the custard into a ready-baked pastry shell; spread over the custard one-half a cup of quince jelly or marmalade, and decorate before serving with dots of whipped cream.

If the front of a white skirt gets scorched in the ironing, the unsightly marks may be removed by rubbing it with a little borax (dry).

PENS USED BY THE ANCIENTS

Theory Put Forward That Babylonian Writers Employed Stippling Tools of Glass

Babylonian authors of hieroglyphics certainly didn't use gold pen points. Did they use stippling tools of glass? Is the inference, archaeological question put by a writer in The Glass Digest, New York, says the Literary Digest. We read:

"It is more likely that the Egyptian scribes first used the glass stylus for their picture writing on papyrus. But that is it may, one of the latest novelties in fountain pens has gained popularity. The ink flows down a special duct in the glass. The nib is more durable than gold, and the ink flows freely and evenly from it. New glass points can be inserted in the ink barrel just as a cork is put into the bottle."

"This pen is novel in other respects. The outside body of the barrel is bamboo, varnished. It is equipped with a self-filler, located in the middle of the barrel, which operates by pressure upon the rubber ink bottle. The cap has a small, hard rubber safety catch band on the self-filling device. A safety clip on the cap prevents loss."
